OVERVIEW

New English as a Second Language Grades 10–11–12 Resources

This list of English as a Second Language Grades 10–11–12 resources contains resources that have been authorized for use in Alberta schools. Alberta Learning selects and authorizes the best possible instructional materials for the implementation of approved programs of study. The resource authorization categories are student basic, student support or authorized teaching, and the status is noted for each resource.

Student Basic learning resources are those student learning resources authorized by Alberta Learning as the most appropriate for addressing the majority of outcomes of the course(s) or substantial components of the course(s); or the most appropriate for meeting general outcomes across two or more grade levels.

Student Support learning resources are those student learning resources authorized by Alberta Learning to assist in addressing some of the outcomes of the course(s) or components of the course(s); or to assist in meeting the outcomes across two or more grade levels.

Authorized Teaching resources are those teaching resources identified as the best available resources to support the implementation of programs of study and courses; they may be teacher guides to accompany student resources or teacher professional resources. The authorized teaching guides are listed with the student resources.

Note: Alberta Learning strongly recommends that teachers read all selections in the student resources and all activities in the teacher guides prior to using them with students. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

SENIOR HIGH ESL PROGRAM ORGANIZATION (LEVELS)

The Senior High English as a Second Language Program of Studies is organized into five levels.

Level 1 is intended for students who are acquiring literacy for the first time or who have had significant gaps in previous schooling.

Level 2 in intended for students who have little or no experience with English prior to entering Alberta schools.

Level 3 is intended for students who have some competency in English and need a program focused specifically on language development for academic learning.

Level 4 is intended for students who are able to succeed in most high school courses with consistent support in English language development for academic learning.

Level 5 students receive assistance with subject specific language development in a variety of ways, such as in learning centres, from peer coaching and with teacher assistance.

ORGANIZATION OF THE RESOURCE LIST

The list of English as a Second Language (ESL) authorized resources is organized in two parts:

Part I: Resource List: Basic, Support, Teaching

Student basic resources followed by student support and authorized teaching resources are listed alphabetically. Each entry provides the following information:

- title of resource
- copyright date
- type of authorization
- levels(s) authorized for
- format
- summary description of the resource
- supplier name, order number and price.

Part II: Annotated Bibliography Listed Alphabetically by Title

Each of the resources in Part I has a corresponding annotation in Part II.
Each annotation identifies:

- the ESL level(s) for which the resource is authorized, the category of authorization (student basic, student support or authorized teaching, and if authorized for another curricular area)
- the format of the resource (print, video, CD-ROM) by the use of icon
- publisher information and notes where the resource is available. If a resource is a part of a series, other authorized titles in the series are cross-referenced.

This series of booklets teaches readers about different elements of Canadian geography and culture. For example, All About Canadian Animals explores the appearance, habitat, diet, predators, offspring, adaptations and special characteristics of Canadian animals, with each booklet focusing on a different animal. The booklets use a high-interest, low-vocabulary approach, and each title includes a glossary, a summary and an index, as well as photographs and maps. This series could be used as a research resource for emerging readers. The content of many of the titles would also fit in with units on science, social studies or nonfiction reading.

This Canadian resource uses adapted versions of authentic newspaper stories as the basis for teaching integrated reading skills. The stories come from across Canada, deal with high-interest everyday topics and include matching picture cards. The student text also includes reading activities, grammer exercises, role-plays and interviews. The stories are also provided in audio form on a cassette tape. The teacher's guide provides answer keys and suggestions for integrating the materials within lesson plans. This resource could be used with a varied skill-level class.

Cautions:

• Teachers are advised to be selective about the choice of questions and exercises to use in the classroom. Some questions/exercises could lead to the invasion of students' privacy.

This Canadian resource uses news broadcasts, interviews and conversations as the basis for teaching language skills. The two videos each contain authentic, current Canadian news articles, "on the street" and formal interviews, and amusing conversations in everyday contexts. The accompanying text consists of twelve units, each divided into the following sections: News Broadcast, Interview, Conversation, Pronunciation, Role Play, and Game or Contact assignment. The text provides a variety of activities designed to promote discussion and learning, including questionnaires, vocabulary cards, card games, board games, dialogues and role-playing activites. The resource takes a multicultural approach with extensive vocabulary alternatives provided. The CD-ROM contains the instructor's guide, which provides teaching suggestions, extension activities, and an answer key to assist with assessing students' written work.

Cautions:

- The text includes a story on a child being saved from a cougar attack, and a discussion of body piercing (pages 119 and 117).
- The video includes an instance of an Asian man being treated with disrespect (a steak is dropped, picked up and brushed off, and the man eats it unknowingly).

This comprehensive, easy-to-read book explores both the theory and practice of ESL assessment, focusing on the need for alternative assessment. The authors explore issues such as how to evaluate ESL students for placement and follow-up, how to look through errors to identify what students know, and effective methods of grading and reporting student success. The resource includes numerous work samples, ideas, organizers, personal experiences, and case studies. Information and suggestions are presented in a clear, useful and sensitive way. ESL teachers can use the strategies as they are described, or adapt them for their own situation.

This series consists of biographies of high-interest contemporary and historical figures ranging from Jane Austen to George Lucas. Each biography is enriched with numerous visuals and captions, as well as other materials such as diagrams, maps, charts and historical records. Each book contains a table of contents and an index, which are helpful tools when using the resources for research. These books would be effective resources for a biography unit. Because of the lengthy text found in the books, they are best suited for intermediate to advanced ESL students.

Cautions:

• Although this series features many Americans and some famous people from around the world, no Canadians are featured.

This three-level series of books helps emerging readers in ESL build idiomatic vocabulary and develop reading and writing skills through progressively challenging readings and activities. Each lesson in the books begins with a short news story about a remarkable but true event, followed by an explanation of idioms, and a variety of comprehension and writing activities, and extension projects. The readings explore high-interest subjects from around the world at a low vocabulary level. Although this is not a Canadian text, the selections reflect a variety of cultures. Integrated, cartoon-style visuals are used throughout the books. Reviews, answer keys and lexicons are also found in each book.

Canada: Coast to Coast is a reader/workbook that contains current information about Canada's peoples, geography and culture. It provides practice in reading fluency, encourages reading for meaning, promotes oral discussion and emphasizes group work and vocabulary building. Thirty-three units provide a variety of relevant and interesting topics for high school students, including the new territory of Nunavut, Olympic medallist Silken Laumann, and different age groups working together. Each topic is accompanied by a picture, which provides opportunities for discussion. The teacher's manual includes blackline masters for extension activities. This resource and teacher's manual are particularly useful for new ESL students at a beginning level of English.

This resource is the fifth in a six-part series designed to help ESL students integrate into the Canadian community while developing language and academic skills through meaningful activities and contexts. Canadian Concepts 5 is organized into ten self-contained thematic units addressing social and cultural issues such as fashion trends, laws, superstitions, medical practices and advertising. Each unit consists of a central reading passage, a listening passage, a video activity (with clips selected from CBC news programs), and related grammar and vocabulary activities. Core activities focus on authentic reading and listening, and allow students to use language individually, in pairs and in groups, using all language strands. The teacher's manual provides supplemental activities for group work, surveys, interviews, reporting, summary writing, listening comprehension, and vocabulary development tasks. Additional worksheets, tapescripts and extension activities are also provided in the teacher's manual.

Canadian Concepts 6 is the highest level in a six-part series designed to help ESL students integrate into the Canadian community while developing language and academic skills through meaningful activities and contexts. The resource is organized into ten self-contained thematic units addressing social and cultural issues such as Canadian identity, Olympic scandals, crime and justice, propaganda in advertising, talk shows, and government funding. Each unit consists of a central reading passage, a listening passage, a video activity (with clips selected from CBC news programs), and related grammar and vocabulary activities. Core activities focus on authentic reading and listening, and allow students to use language individually, in pairs and in groups, using all language strands. The activities emphasize language fluency, oral presentation skills and analytical thinking. The resource and teacher's manual offer suggestions for a variety of activities including group work, discussion, surveys, newspaper articles, book reports, journals and formal writing. The teacher's manual also provides supplemental grammar activities.

Cautions:

• Many of the topics presented in this resource are intended to encourage debate and may be controversial in nature.

• Alberta Learning strongly recommends that teachers preview this resource. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

These resources are part of a series of short films based on stories by Canadian authors. The Cap and All the Years are adaptations of two Morley Callahan short stories that explore family values and interactions. The videos include situations that may be relevant to many ESL students, and could be used to start discussion on a variety of topics, including peer pressure, employment, theft, family tension and family bonds.

The Cap tells the story of Steve, a young boy who loses his prized autographed baseball cap and later sees the son of a wealthy businessman wearing it. When Steve's unemployed father is offered $100 for the cap, he must struggle to maintain his son's respect, while Steve struggles to hold on to a childhood dream.

All the Years tells the story of Al, a nineteen-year-old who is caught stealing from a drug store. When his mother's efforts prevent him from being charged, Al gains a better understanding of himself and the special relationship he has with his mother.

Cautions:

- Alberta Learning strongly recommends that teachers preview these resources. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

Classics Canada is a collection of authentic Canadian short stories, poems, folktales and drama, including pieces by Margaret Atwood, Robertson Davies and Mordecai Richler. Each selection is preceded by an introduction to the author and background information on the work, as well as a black and white illustration. Reading, writing and discussion activities follow each selection. Longer pieces are divided into sections, with reading comprehension questions and a glossary of difficult or unfamiliar terms following each part. A "Library Books" section is also included for each piece, referring students to other reading materials by the same author, about the author or on the same topic as the text. The audiocassettes include read-along versions of each piece, plus listening activities keyed to the readings. The teacher's manuals offer teaching suggestions, answers to student activities and sources for further research.

Comments:

- Some of the selections may be used in English 10-1 and 10-2 classes.

Cautions:

- The map displayed at the end of the books does not show Nunavut.
- The additional resources identified in the "Library Books" sections have not been reviewed or authorized by Alberta Learning.

This video presents a live-action retelling of Robert Service's classic Canadian poem "The Cremation of Sam McGee." Filmed on location, the video portrays the difficulties of prospector life in the remote Arctic during the late 1890s. The film touches on several key themes: man's battle with a harsh environment, the importance of honouring a friend's last wishes, and the tricks that the mind can play on you. The language in the film is faithful to the poem's original ballad form, maintaining Service's rhyme, rhythm and colourful details. The visuals make the poem more comprehensible for ESL students and provide a nice depiction of the northern Canadian landscape. The length is appropriate for classroom work.

This video explores some of the reasons why students may drop out of school, and provides useful and practical strategies for students to take charge of their own learning when encountering roadblocks to success. The video promotes the belief that a supportive school environment is necessary for student success. The video is clearly organized with effective text support on the screen. It includes demonstrations of two group activities, which teachers can use in the classroom. The use of high school students makes this video appealing to teens. The short teaching guide provides student quizzes, answer keys, and instructions for recreating the demonstrated activities.

Cautions:

• The video portrays ethnic diversity; however, American accents and terms may affect comprehension.

This text provides academically-oriented reading and writing activities that focus on rhetorical modes and process-writing for paragraphs. The text explains organizational and linguistic features of different kinds of paragraphs, and teaches students how to narrate, describe, analyze, compare and contrast, classify and evaluate at the paragraph level. It also provides a complete introduction to the essay with a focus on bridging between paragraph- and essay-level writing. Engaging readings and sample writing passages are used as a starting point for student writing, with new vocabulary bolded and definitions provided in the margin. The resource also uses CNN video clips as writing prompts for each chapter, and suggests Internet activities for research and inspiration. Each chapter contains learning goals, previewing activities, comprehension exercises, and step-by-step composition activities. These activities clearly address features that are challenging to ESL learners. The appendices include a glossary, grammar reference material, and ideas for writing topics. The instructor's manual contains answer keys and the video transcripts.

ELLIS: English Language Learning Instruction System is a comprehensive software program for ESL students at all levels. The cornerstone of the program is video clips that feature authentic situations where language is used, which are followed by related lessons and tests. The program lets students record their own voices for comparison to English speakers, and also features a record-keeping system that can be used to track students as they progress through the material at their own pace. A "Canadian" button on the menu bar allows students to access information on Canadian vocabulary and culture. Further materials are available through the developer's Web site. The workbook provides supplementary materials, but is a minor part of the package.

Comments:

- The proper use of ELLIS will require the teacher to become familiar with the lessons and spend time setting up a records database. After intitial set-up, ELLIS could be used for individual instruction and self-paced learning.

The English, Yes! series helps students learn English through adapted pieces of literature from classic and contemporary authors. The literature segments are used as starting points for building comprehension, vocabulary, and understanding of idioms and grammar, as well as listening, speaking and writing skills. Each story or poem is followed by ten self-scoring multiple choice questions and a variety of directed writing activities, as well as ideas for sharing and discussing with others. Many of the readings include black and white illustrations. The corresponding teacher's guide includes complete lesson plans and reproducible tests for every reading selection. Learning strategies, graphic organizers, and other teaching tools are also provided in the guide.

Comments:

- English, Yes! is available in seven levels; "Literacy" is the first level in the series and corresponds to level 1 ESL outcomes.

Cautions:

- Some of the literary selections deal with potentially sensitive or controversial issues such as death, revenge and criminal justice. Teachers should be aware of possible concerns that may arise during discussion.
- Alberta Learning strongly recommends that teachers preview this resource. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

This comprehensive program helps students develop communicative competency across all language strands. The series has three levels, suitable for beginner to low-intermediate students. The student text at each level consists of 16 topically-related units. Each unit introduces new vocabularly and grammar, and provides opportunities for students to practise their listening, speaking, reading and writing skills through a variety of exercises and activities (listening materials are provided on the audiocassettes and CDs). Pair and group work opportunities are embedded throughout the text to encourage authentic communicative activities. Each student book has a corresponding workbook to give students additional practice on their own or in the classroom. The workbooks are organized around the same 16 units as the student texts, with each unit in the workbooks divided into the following sections: Working with Words, Looking at Language, Reading and Thinking, and Showing What You Know. Each student book also has a corresponding teacher's annotated edition that provides tape scripts, answer keys, step-by-step instructions for each unit, pronunciation tips, extension activities, cultural notes, and assessments.

Cautions:

• The Web site component referred to in the teacher's edition has not been reviewed or authorized by Alberta Learning.

• Expressions 3 - Teachers are advised to omit the exercise that has students create an "insincere apology" (teacher and student editions, p. 57); and to omit the exercise that has students decide which job would best suit a student in another group (teacher and student editions, page 14).

• Expressions 3 - Teachers are encouraged to supplement activities/materials to include more examples of people with low-income occupations, to emphasize contributions and service rather than material success and consumerism, and to present positive portrayals of Aboriginal peoples and people with disabilities.

These readers are part of the Second Chance Reading series, which attempts to engage students by showing them that fact can be as exciting as fiction. The seven authorized titles deal with a variety of high-interest topics: animal interactions, natural disasters, shipwrecks and amazing science. Each fictional book is paired with a factual article on a related theme. For example, Edge of Disaster tells the fictional story of a boy caught in a volcanic eruption, while Earth Alert teaches students about the powerful and destructive forces of nature. All the books in the series are written at the same reading level, but each is graduated to provide progressively more challenge. Reading strategies are identified and developed. The teacher's guide provides lesson plans for each book, written and task-based assessments, reproducible worksheets, and suggestions for extensions and applications. Ideas are suggested for speaking, listening, writing and research. This resource is suitable for high-beginner to intermediate students.

Comments:

• These books are intended for struggling or reluctant readers from upper elementary to Grade 10, and some images and characters may appear juvenille. However, the books are still useful for high-school ESL students.

Cautions:

• Some of the stories/articles contain violence or references to death.

• Alberta Learning strongly recommends that teachers preview these resources. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

This is the first text in a series of developmental readers for ESL students. Facts & Figures is designed to help beginner ESL students build the vocabulary they require to continue their language study, taking them from approximately 300 to 800 words. The book consists of 35 nonfiction readings organized into seven thematic units, with progressive levels of difficulty. The readings explore thought-provoking global issues that may be of particular interest to ESL students and immigrants. Although the text is not Canadian, the selections deal with global issues and reflect a variety of cultures. Each reading is accompanied by pre-reading exercises, vocabulary and comprehension activities, and challenging writing and viewing extension activities.

Comments:

• An accompanying teacher's guide, audiocassette and CNN video are also available; however, the student text can stand alone. The additional components have not been authorized by Alberta Learning.

These two videos introduce ESL students to Canada's historical background, and serve as a backdrop for discussion and comparison of events, relationships and cultural values. First Journey, Fort William tells the fictional story of a child of the fur trade in 1815. It recreates life in the trading posts of Lake Winnipeg, Montreal and Fort William, and highlights the Scottish, French and Aboriginal people of the fur-trading society. Rendezvous Canada, 1606 portrays the parallel lives of two teenagers, one a Huron Cree and one a French boy at the Port Royal settlement. It also chronicles the events surrounding the alliance between the Huron and Champlain.

Comments:

• This resource could serve as a supplement to social studies topics and units in ESL classes.

• Language activities are not suggested or provided.

This resource teaches basic writing skills, focusing on sentence structure, grammar and paragraphing. The text uses models and examples to explain simple, compound and complex sentence structures, and addresses common trouble spots for students. Exercises for practice and review are included. Students also have the opportunity to rehearse and practise different kinds of writing, including instructions, descriptive writing, and opinion papers.

Comments:

- This resource allows students to practise writing skills and peer-editing, but does not address the spoken or oral language components of the ESL program of studies.
- The resource generally focuses on post-writing practices and corrections.
- There is no teacher's guide.

This comprehensive resource is the intermediate level in a five-level grammar series. Each thematic unit in the text focuses on a specific grammatical structure. Major areas of focus include present, past and future tenses; pronouns; modals and related verbs; present perfect tense; and adjectives and adverbs. The units follow a four-step approach. First, new structures are introduced within natural contexts through reading passages, articles or dialogues. Next, the structures are explained through grammar charts, notes and examples. Then, focused practice of the structure's form and meaning is provided through numerous and varied controlled exercises. Finally, open-ended communicative activities give students the opportunity to personalize what they have learned and practise using the new structures by discussing everyday issues. Each major section also includes guided writing activities. Self-assessment tests at the end of each section let students evaluate their own progress. In addition, the teacher's manual provides diagnostic and final tests. An extensive appendix summarizes grammar rules for reference. The audio component is directly related to the book with exercises that require careful listening and extended thinking. The workbook provides additional exercises.

Comments:

• The CD-ROM is an older style program with fill-in-the-blank exercises, error correction, and some graphics; however, there is no animation and a lack of colour.

Cautions:

• The resource was produced in the United States and reflects American culture. Teachers may wish to substitute Canadian references where appropriate.

• Some words used in the resource to describe Spanish-speaking people may be seen as derogatory by Spanish-speaking people and others.

This resource takes a communicative approach to teaching spoken English. The resource consists of ten units, each focusing on a different basic function of spoken language: requesting and giving information, requesting and giving directions, interrupting and expressing likes and dislikes, making suggestions, making small talk, agreeing and disagreeing, describing, giving opinions, persuading, and developing an idea. A variety of activities are provided to practise each function, including games, pair work, and collaborative group work. The lessons and activities teach both the linguistic rules (grammar, phonology) and the sociolinguistic rules (appropriateness, level of formality) for spoken English.

Comments:

• The activities are appropriate for intermediate and advanced students, but will need to be adapted to fit the content of the senior high program of studies.

This text is a clear and concise description of the fundamentals of English grammar. Grammar areas covered include personal pronouns; forms of "other;" connecting ideas with coordinating and subordinating conjunctions; comparisons; the use of "must" to make logical conclusions; expressing the immediate future using "be" and "about to;" nonspecific versus specific pronouns; infinitives; and using a gerund after a preposition. A variety of exercises are provided to practise new grammar and develop general language skills. The text provides a core of interesting and appropriate materials around which instructors can build classroom activities and a course syllabus. It also views vocabulary development as integral to the development of structure usage. The teacher's guide includes teaching strategies, activities and answer keys.

Comments:

- It is recommend that the student text and teacher's guide be used as a unit; a workbook and answer key are also available but are not necessary and have not been authorized by Alberta Learning.

This text is a clear and concise description of the fundamentals of English grammar. Grammar areas covered include personal pronouns; forms of "other;" connecting ideas with coordinating and subordinating conjunctions; comparisons; the use of "must" to make logical conclusions; expressing the immediate future using "be" and "about to;" nonspecific versus specific pronouns; infinitives; and using a gerund after a preposition. A variety of exercises are provided to practise new grammar and develop general language skills. The text provides a core of interesting and appropriate materials around which instructors can build classroom activities and a course syllabus. It also views vocabulary development as integral to the development of structure usage. The teacher's guide includes teaching strategies, activities and answer keys.

The revised 3rd edition has been expanded, with larger pages and increased length. The material has been reorganized, resulting in two fewer chapters. The new edition also contains the following changes: 1) Communication aspects are more fully developed and include opportunities within the students' own life experiences. 2) There is an increased emphasis on interactive communication, with pair and group work now available in addition to teacher-led activities. 3) The variety of exercises has been expanded, and now includes free-response and open-ended communication activities in addition to controlled response exercises. 4) Two new appendices have been added, with phrasal verbs and preposition combinations for teachers to intersperse throughout the teaching term.

Comments:

• It is recommend that the student text and teacher's guide be used as a unit; a workbook and answer key are also available but are not necessary and have not been authorized by Alberta Learning.

This book, created by a Canadian ESL instructor, provides teachers with a variety of language games designed to make teaching and learning English fun. The games include variations on jumbles, word finds, tic-tac-toe and other common games, plus a number of original activities. There are 110 games in total, ranging in level from beginner to advanced. All of the games are simple to understand and explain, require little preparation and few materials, and can be easily adapted. For each game, the text identifies the language skill or skills being employed—reading, writing, listening, speaking—and the optimal group size. The game's instructional objective (for example, vocabulary expansion), the materials needed, a full description and additional suggestions are also provided.

These two videos discuss efforts made by numerous Canadian foreign aid organizations to enhance the living conditions in developing countries. Beginnings provides an overview of work being done in the global village, and introduces the altruistic individuals and institutions contributing to change. Representatives of various aid agencies are interviewed. The video highlights Canadian contributions to agriculture, health care, water, literacy, and community and economic development in Uganda.

Community, Commitment, Compassion explores the roots of compassion, examining how and why people get involved in international aid work. This video focuses on the successful work of CIDA in Jordan, especially in ensuring access to clean drinking water. Ways in which teens and education can make a difference in global issues such as poverty and child labour are discussed.

Comments:

• Some segments of the videos are appropriate for use with ESL students. Others are recommended for teacher viewing only (e.g., long interviews with foreign aid representatives). Teachers are advised to preview the videos and select appropriate portions for classroom use.

Cautions:

• Scenes form Community, Commitment, and Compassion describe birth control in the Middle East which may offend students.

This resource is a basic grammar guide written specifically for ESL students. Twenty-one target areas are discussed, covering elementary to lower-intermediate grammar topics. The book clearly explains each rule and presents authentic examples, pointing out differences between written and spoken language, and between formal and informal usage. Extensive practice exercises and pre- and post-unit tests are provided, with answers included in the book. The resource includes useful reference material for ESL students, including several glossaries, summaries of different kinds and tenses of verbs, and a guide to contractions. Sections of the resource could be used with individual students to provide extra practice in specific areas.

Comments:

- The text is based on British English, but does not use British idioms.

This supplementary grammar resource focuses on giving students an understanding of grammatical structures at the sentence level so that they can use these structure in accurate and meaningful ways. Each chapter covers a different grammar structure (e.g., subject pronouns, possessives). Concepts are introduced individually with oral exercises and discussion. Activities progress from teacher-led to partner/group to independent activities. The activities range from matching pictures with phrases and filling in practice sentences to context-based or situational writing and speaking exercises. The resource also includes TOEFL-type quizzes.

Have Your Say! is an intensive course in listening and speaking designed to take ESL learners from an intermediate to an advanced level. The units cover relevant topics such as making introductions, society and culture, and nature and the environment. Key structures and expressions are clearly presented in highlighted boxes, and sections on idioms provide students with opportunities to use idioms in the context of a conversation. Short "Tips for Talk" sidebars provide practical suggestions for speaking in North American English, including tips on pronunciation, conversation strategies and cultural information. Cartoons are used throughout the text to add visual interest and humour. Student self-evaluation sections let students take responsibility for their learning and focus on areas where they still need practice. The resource uses a variety of listening materials including news reports, CBC interviews, dialogues and telephone conversations. Numerous speaking activities are provided to let students practice language functions, structures and expressions. These activities include interviews, questionnaires, role-plays and group discussions. This resource could be used as a teacher reference for communication activities for higher-level ESL students.

This anthology is the product of the "Memories" writing project initiated by the Vancouver School Board to give ESL students from various countries (now living in Canada) an opportunity to record and share their personal experiences and memories. The anthology is divided into three sections: "Home," "Leaving," and "New Country and Strange Nation." These sections contain poems and short personal narratives about topics such as school, friends, family, ceremonies and beliefs, war and forced labour. The individual stories, which are full of insight and emotion, can serve as models for writing or stimulate classroom discussion to broaden understanding and facilitate communication among both ESL and non-ESL students. Teachers could use the resource as-is or could develop activities based on these stories. The pieces are written at an intermediate to advanced level.

In the Time of Gods and Heroes is a collection of Greek myths written at a grade 2-5 reading level. The twelve myths are organized into three themes. "Choice and Consequence" includes the stories of Prometheus, Orestes, Antigone, and The Judgement of Paris. "The Stuff of Heroes" includes the stories of Odysseus and the Cyclops, The Twelve Labors of Heracles, Atlanta, and Perseus. Finally, "In the Name of Love" tells the stories of the theft of Persephone, Orpheus and Eurydice, Pyramus and Thisbe, and Theseus and Ariadne. Each myth is followed by comprehension, vocabulary and critical thinking exercises. Timed reading charts are included to help students monitor and increase their reading rate. The reading selections in this resource could be used as part of a theme-based unit of study.

Cautions:

• Myths may present disturbing themes and should be taught with sensitivity.

• Alberta Learning strongly recommends that teachers preview this resource. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

Intercom 2000 is a comprehensive four-level series that follows a spiraled approach to language learning: presentation, reinforcement, expansion, and regular review of forms and structures. The series progresses from survival-level to academic-level language. The student texts are well structured and easy to use, with a balance of functions and grammar, readings, skills practice and interactive activities. The books are organized into theme-based units, with communication and grammar topics integrated throughout. Authentic readings are presented with reading strategy activities, and culminating activities are provided for each unit.

Comments:

- This series would be particularly useful for teachers who do not have experience with ESL students. It could be used in an ESL class or for independent ESL work in a regular classroom.
- Workbooks, audiocassettes, a testing program and a teacher's guide are also available for each level, but have not been authorized by Alberta Learning.

This resource is based on the notion of the "jigsaw classroom," which takes a cooperative approach to learning. The binder contains six reproducible readings based on contemporary social issues such as pollution, immigration and industrial accidents. Each of the readings is told from four different perspectives. Students are assigned to small "jigsaw" groups. These groups are then rearranged into "expert" groups, with each group receiving a different part of the reading to discuss, interpret and summarize. Students then reconvene with their original jigsaw groups to communicate their findings, come up with a comprehensive understanding of the issue and answer various questions about the reading. The author makes effective use of headings, paragraph markers, captions and diagrams to guide the reader. Cooperative skills sheets offer students opportunities to develop both specific reading skills and effective learning strategies for group work. The resource was designed for adolescent and adult learners who need to develop their reading and discussion skills for application across the curriculum. The readings and activities are written at three different language levels, making the resource well suited for use in multilevel classes. The binder also includes an extensive rationale for the jigsaw strategy and instructions for use.

This traditional fill-in-the-blank workbook series emphasizes language conventions, writing and study skills. Each workbook consists of six units addressing key skill areas: vocabulary, sentences, grammar and usage, capitalization and punctuation, composition, and study skills. Each lesson begins with a learning objective and a new rule followed by an example. Practice exercises are provided at the end of each lesson and unit. The composition unit discusses process-writing techniques such as clustering and brainstorming, as well as structural skills like writing topic sentences and selecting supporting details. The study skills unit focuses on dictionary and library skills. Lessons are clear and consistent, with accessible vocabulary. This resource would be ideal for independent use at school or at home for level 3, 4 or 5 students experiencing specific difficulties.

This teacher resource presents an in-depth explanation of the metacognitive model and instructional framework of strategies-based instruction. The initial chapters outline the framework for strategies instruction and for the five phases of the Cognitive Academic Language Learning Approach (CALLA): preparation, presentation, practice, evaluation and expansion. The later chapters provide practical approaches for integrating strategies-based instruction into content-based ESL lessons at both the elementary and secondary levels. Numerous suggestions are presented, including techniques for explicit strategies instruction, cooperative group activities, student self-assessment and goal-setting tools, and sample lesson plans. Reproducible charts, graphs and checklists are included.

Making Connections 1 is the first level in a series of comprehensive, integrated resources that focus on developing both language skills and higher-order thinking skills through age-appropriate contexts and academic content. The student text is organized around thematic units that deal with everyday activities such as getting around school, resolving conflict and making decisions. Each unit includes a wide range of reading passages and other activities using an integrated, cross-curricular approach, with content from literature, social studies, science and mathematics. Activities include games, interviews, fill-in-the-blank grammar and vocabulary exercises, group discussions, listening activities and experience-based writing, with additional activities provided in the workbook. The text is in full colour, with extensive use of photographs, cartoons, diagrams and other visuals.

The teacher's edition includes tapescripts and strategies for using activities in the student text. The assessment package includes progress checks, unit tests and portfolio development exercises. Transparency masters are also provided. The user-friendly teacher's guide provides background notes, activities and checklists for using both the Making Connections series and the Voices in Literature series. It also provides ideas for integrating the teaching of the two series.

Comments:

• The CD-ROM is somewhat confusing to use; students will need direction at first.

Making Connections 3 is the third level in a series of comprehensive, integrated resources that focus on developing both language skills and higher-order thinking skills through age-appropriate contexts and academic content. The student text is organized around thematic units that deal with everyday activities such as getting around school, resolving conflict and making decisions. Each unit includes a wide range of reading passages and other activities using an integrated, cross-curricular approach, with content from literature, social studies, science and mathematics. Activities include games, interviews, fill-in-the-blank grammar and vocabulary exercises, group discussions, listening activities and experience-based writing, with additional activities provided in the workbook. The text is in full colour, with extensive use of photographs, cartoons, diagrams and other visuals.

This video contains 20 short clips from the Canada Vignettes Series. Each clip is one to two minutes in length and provides a snapshot of a particular event or time in Canadian history. The clips feature a wide range of tones, from humorous to serious, and cover a diversity of topics such as the Bluenose schooners, the Cape Breton coal miners, the hardships of early prairie farm life, and the story of Lady Frances Simpson's piano crossing the muskeg lakes of Northern Ontario. Each vignette provides an opportunity for discussion of the event, as well as some of the similarities and differences of Canadian history in relation to other cultures. Taken together, they provide a picture of the diverse physical, cultural and economic factors that have shaped our country.

My Country, Our History is an introduction to Canadian history for students with little or no knowledge of the country's past. The text begins with an introductory unit on Canada's geography, government and people. It then progresses chronologically through the history of Canada from Confederation through to 2002. These units deal with specific topics related to Canada's settlement, development, economy and culture at various points in time. The final chapter on civics explains the rights and obligations of Canadian citizenship. Pre-reading questions are provided, and comprehension and extension questions are included after each major section to stimulate discussion and writing. There are numerous photographs, illustrations and other visuals interspersed throughout the text, and the page layout and font are user friendly. The reading level of the text is approximately grade 9; however, the language is sequenced so that initial chapters are short and simply written, while later chapters use more complex language and sentence patterns. New vocabulary and important phrases are highlighted throughout the text. The teacher's resource book explains how to use the student text, provides lesson notes for chapters, and offers a variety of reproducible student materials for each chapter (e.g., graphic organizers, cloze activities, vocabulary puzzles, group activities, writing assignments, simulation and role-play activities). This resource would be suitable for teachers working with students at a wide range of levels.

Cautions:

• Some portions of the text include references to death, war, violence and racism within a historical context.

• Alberta Learning strongly recommends that teachers preview this resource. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

This Canadian resource consists of three sections. The first section comprehensively covers reading and writing skills through 21 tutorials and various examples of written work, some of which were done by Canadian students. The second section focuses on technical writing, providing basic examples of technical writing concepts that students will need to enter the workforce. The third section, on oral and visual communication, prepares students for research assignments. Learning strategies, checklists, tips and activities support each outcome in the three sections. Each of the tutorials begins with learning outcomes and ends with tools for measuring success. The complementary teacher's guide provides strategies for teaching ESL learners, assessment suggestions, blackline masters and additional activities.

Cautions:

• Only one example is provided for most of the different types of reading materials and writing assignments; teachers will have to supplement these with additional examples for further student participation.

This resource is the first in a two book intermediate writing series designed to give strategies and practice in academic writing. Book 1 focuses specifically on paragraph writing. The book is organized into ten theme-based units, each on a different high-interest topic. A communicative approach is used, with step-by-step writing tasks and extension activities. Each unit includes free-writing, engaging reading passages, prewriting activities, guided writing, editing and proofreading. A wide variety of activities are provided to reflect different learning styles. As students work through the units, they will complete a range of cross-curricular writing assignments, such as preparing an interview or solving a cross-cultural business problem. These activities focus not only on writing skills, but also on promoting discussion and developing higher-order critical and analytical thinking skills. Grammar, vocabulary, and rhetoric are integrated into the context of each theme. Graphic organizers and answer keys are included.

Cautions:

- Readings come from United States and various countries around the world, but no Canadian content is included.
- The resource includes some sensitive topics, including adoption and death.
- Alberta Learning strongly recommends that teachers preview this resource. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

Reflections is an integrated language activity book suitable for intermediate and advanced ESL students. The first part of the text offers a variety of comprehension, discussion and writing activities based on a thematically-organized selection of readings. Context-based grammar and vocabulary exercises are also included. The readings vary in length and difficulty, and encompass a wide range of genres, including articles, short stories, poetry and drama. The pieces also range widely in content and style. The readings include several works by Canadian authors, including Farley Mowat, E.J. Pratt and Emily Carr. Students are asked to examine the writing choices that these authors have made, and discuss both the text and the assumptions that lie behind it. The second part of the resource focuses on discussion, oral presentations and writing activities based on "situational" dilemmas drawn from everyday life. The text includes charts of themes, vocabulary, grammar and activities to help teachers in planning. The instructor's guide contains teaching strategies, pre-reading questions, and advice and approaches for using the various components in the student text.

These Alberta-developed workbooks promote a strategy-based approach to spelling. Each workbook begins by describing spelling tools, such as phonics, syllabication, word families, mnemonics, and traditional spelling rules for English. The remainder of the books consist of 20 thematically-organized units on everyday topics such as home, work and health. The units are patterned for literacy students and reflect Canadian contexts. Each lesson uses five of the tools introduced at the beginning of the book to teach students how to spell 15 new words. The suggested activities focus on applying spelling strategies in real-life situations such as writing a shopping list or filling out a form. Dictations are also provided for practice.

This resource provides in-depth information for ESL and mainstream teachers and administrators to assist them in planning for ESL students. Focusing on a Canadian urban context, it offers a pedagogical framework and practical advice on topics related to immigrant adjustment, inclusive school and classroom environments, and inclusive approaches to curriculum, instruction and assessment. Each of the nine chapters provides relevant theoretical background, detailed and concrete suggestions, and a checklist for readers to evaluate how well their school incorporates the recommendations and suggestions being made.

This teacher resource offers principles and strategies to help students at every grade level develop vocabulary, comprehend informational and narrative text, and engage in meaningful discussions. The manual discusses the interactive elements of reading; metacomprehension and reflective actions; strategic teaching; and reading strategies. It gives examples and makes suggestions for appropriate use of key visuals, organizational charts and diagrams. The resource also includes a large set of reproducible blackline masters that provide key visuals to support ESL lessons. The charts and diagrams provided focus on relevant content areas and are specific to ESL learners.

Cautions:

- The teacher's manual includes a reference to the Klu Klux Klan; teachers may wish to substitute other examples.
- The appendix includes a list of other books; these resources have not been reviewed or authorized by Alberta Learning.

This resource consists of two CD-ROMs that provide instruction, activities and games for level 1 to 3 language learners. The program has an appealing, interactive format that includes multimedia video and sound dialogues, speech recognition to record and improve pronunciation, 3D phonetic animations, grammar and vocabulary work, and dictation exercises. Lesson reports and progress charts are also included to let students assess, review and record their own progress.

Cautions:

• Some of the cartoons that accompany the grammar exercises contain stereotypes.
• The resource contains references to and images of the World Trade Centre.
• There are references to alcohol consumption.
• Alberta Learning strongly recommends that teachers preview this resource. Careful consideration should be given to the sensitivities of both the student audience and the community.

This text presents verb tenses within clear contexts, emphasizing contrasts between different tenses in order to help more advanced students learn how to integrate all tenses and understand their shades of meaning. Explanations and examples of the use of each tense are provided, along with timelines. The text contains a variety of contextualized oral and written exercises for students to practise, including unique activities such as filmstrip stories and picture puzzles. This resource acts as an in-depth review for students who have studied some or all of the tenses.

Comments:

• Occasionally the font used in the text may be difficult for some students to read (e.g., page 90).

This locally-developed resource provides a series of over 80 graphic organizers that teachers can use across grades and subjects to develop and reinforce thinking competencies. Included in the resource are tools for generating and identifying ideas; describing; comparing and contrasting; classifying; exploring part-whole relationships; sequencing; problem solving; and organizing information. Student masters are provided, as well as computer-based tools. The book also explains how and when to use each tool, describes variations of the tools, identifies which tools could be used together effectively, and provides visual models. This resource will assist teachers in guiding students to become more aware of their own thinking. Multiple experiences with each tool will let students internalize the best strategies for their own thinking.

Comments:

• The resource was developed by experts in special needs education, but the learning strategies are applicable to all learners.

This is the second text in a series of developmental readers for ESL students. Thoughts and Notions is designed to help high-beginner ESL students build the vocabulary they require to continue their language study, taking them from approximately 800 to 2000 words. The book consists of nonfiction readings organized into thematic units with progressive levels of difficulty. The readings deal with high-interest topics such as inventions and inventors, unusual sports, food, mysteries, and business. Vocabulary is presented within the context of a short reading, and key vocabulary in each story is repeated in a variety of exercises and applications. Readings are accompanied by pre-reading exercises, vocabulary and comprehension activities, and challenging writing and viewing extension activities.

Comments:

• An accompanying teacher's guide, audiocassette and CNN video are also available; however, the student text can stand alone. The additional components have not been authorized by Alberta Learning.

Time Out for Better English Plus is a series of activity books created by a Canadian ESL teacher. The books contain short grammar lessons combined with numerous activities that incorporate everyday, Canadian contexts. Activities include fill-in-the-blank exercises, True/False questions, reading comprehension passages, and speaking and writing activities. The books begin with a short section on reading strategies and end with a list of regular and irregular verb conjugations. Listening passages are provided on the accompanying audiocassette, with reproducible worksheets available in the teacher's copy. The teacher's copy also includes the entire text of the student activity book, with answers and additional instructions marked for each exercise, as well as teaching notes, answer keys for self-assessment tests, and unit tests and answers.

Time Out for Better English Plus: Secondary 3 contains the following units: "About Words" (explanations and exercises on various parts of speech), "About the Simple Present," "Adjectives, Articles and Pronouns," "About the Present Continuous," "About the Simple Past," "More on Question Words," "About the Future," and "There is/There are."

Cautions:

- Teachers may wish to supplement the resource with materials accurately portraying the diversity of Canadian society.

Understanding and Using English Grammar is a classic ESL text for intermediate to advanced students. The resource provides thorough coverage of grammar points accompanied by tables to explain the structures and written reinforcement exercises. The texts can be used to teach specific structures or to supplement lessons around various themes. This edition has new exercise material and shorter units for easier classroom use. It includes more authentic and interactive communicative activities than previous editions, including options for pair and group work. There are also expanded error analysis exercises, allowing students to study independently and assess their progress.

Comments:

• Because the resource contains more activities than class time will permit, teachers may wish to consult the table of contents to choose a specific focus.

The Up Close series consists of four levels of resources to support English language learning for secondary and adult learners from beginner to lower-advanced levels. The series uses a spiraled approach to gradually build listening, speaking, reading and writing skills, with a focus on social interaction and communicative competency. At each level, the student text contains twelve 10-page lessons. In Up Close 1 and 2, each lesson begins with a colour photo story on a topic of general interest, which provides the context for introducing new grammar and usage. The text includes pair and small group activities, practical language pages that present vocabulary and phrases in everyday communication, and task-based reading and writing sections that develop real-life skills in intercultural situations.

In addition to the student text, a variety of components are available. For students, the audio CD provides conversations and pronunciation exercises; the workbook includes a variety of conversation, grammar, vocabulary, reading and writing exercises to practise new learning from each lesson in the student text, as well as "Learning Log" pages that let students monitor their progress. For levels 1 and 2 in the series, the pack of 36 full-colour, 8"x10" situation cards offers ready-made activities to enhance student learning.

A comprehensive teacher's edition is available for each level in the series. In addition to step-by-step instructions for teaching each lesson, the teacher's editions include answer keys, tapescripts, extension activities, language and cultural notes, additional word banks and tips for skills development. The assessment package includes unit tests, a mid-term, a final test, an answer key, and an audiocassette. The teacher's resource CD includes placement tests, other tests and extension activities for all four levels in the series.

This teacher resource is built on the notion that student writing can be used as a basis for assessing reading skills. The resource describes the rationale for using student writing samples, emphasizing the authenticity of these texts and the importance of valuing and including students, and then provides steps for administering writing passages as tools to assess oral reading skills. The introductory section is followed by a variety of short writing samples produced by the author's students, along with keys for assessing oral reading and oral comprehension questions. The samples are provided as models and are grouped into Basic, Intermediate I, Intermediate II and Advanced.

Voices in Literature is a three-level series that integrates authentic literature and fine art with rich, active and interactive classroom learning activities that teach language skills in context. The literature selections in the student text are engaging, multicultural, and represent a broad range of genres. These selections are organized thematically. Pre- and post-reading activities are provided, including drama activities, role-plays and cooperative learning exercises. Audio versions of some of the readings are provided on the student tapes. The "Skillbuilder" workbook and audiocassette includes additional exercises to build skills in listening and speaking, grammar, reading, writing and literacy. The "Student Journal with Activity Masters" provides practical and reproducible activity masters, including a number of graphic organizers.

The teacher's guide includes multi-level teaching options, at-a-glance skills charts, and grammar and phonics mini-lessons, while the assessment package contains strategies and tools for evaluating student learning. Finally, the user-friendly Teacher's Guide to Using the Heinle & Heinle ESL Program provides background notes, activities and checklists for using both the Making Connections series and the Voices in Literature series. It also provides ideas for integrating the teaching of the two series.

Comments:

• These resources complement the Making Connections series, which focuses on community and campus concerns.

Cautions:

• The resources include activities that ask students about their belief systems, which could lead to an invasion of privacy.
• Each unit includes a chapter on follow-up. These additional materials have not been reviewed or authorized by Alberta Learning.
• The moneylender story in the Bronze-level tape is stereotyped with some undesirable characteristics; this portrayal needs to be balanced with more positive and diverse depictions. The tape also uses the chant "Solomon Grundy;" teachers may want to consider using an alternate.

Voices in Literature is a three-level series that integrates authentic literature and fine art with rich, active and interactive classroom learning activities that teach language skills in context. The literature selections in the student text are engaging, multicultural, and represent a broad range of genres. These selections are organized thematically. Pre- and post-reading activities are provided, including drama activities, role-plays and cooperative learning exercises. Audio versions of some of the readings are provided on the student tapes. The "Skillbuilder" workbook and audiocassette includes additional exercises to build skills in listening and speaking, grammar, reading, writing and literacy. The "Student Journal with Activity Masters" provides practical and reproducible activity masters, including a number of graphic organizers.

The teacher's guide includes multi-level teaching options, at-a-glance skills charts, and grammar and phonics mini-lessons, while the assessment package contains strategies and tools for evaluating student learning. Finally, the user-friendly Teacher's Guide to Using the Heinle & Heinle ESL Program provides background notes, activities and checklists for using both the Making Connections series and the Voices in Literature series. It also provides ideas for integrating the teaching of the two series.

Comments:

• These resources complement the Making Connections series, which focuses on community and campus concerns.

Cautions:

• Each unit includes a chapter on follow-up. These additional materials have not been reviewed or authorized by Alberta Learning.

This resource guides students through a process-based approach to developing more advanced academic writing skills. It breaks the writing process into clear and manageable steps, from sentence construction to paragraph development to a formal argument. The resource also involves students in sharing personal and cultural experiences as a starting point for writing and discussion, thereby contributing to oral language skills and positive student interactions. A variety of writing activities are provided, with topics ranging from the personal (such as weddings in various cultures) to global issues (such as famine).

This process-based guide to writing, reading and thinking is divided into four major areas: "The Process of Writing" focuses on basic elements of writing, and using the writing process; "The Forms of Writing" deals with personal, subject, creative, report, and workplace writing; "The Tools of Writing" addresses topics such as searching for information, thinking to learn, reading to learn, and learning to learn; "The Proofreader's Guide" explains the editing process and the mechanics of language, including punctuation, spelling, word choice, sentences and parts of speech. The book is well-organized and uses colour and fonts effectively. Icons are used to highlight specific strategies. An index is included, making it easy to access information in the handbook.

Comments:

- The handbook would be a valuable resource for students, teachers or parents.

This American resource is intended to prepare students for university writing by teaching them how to construct simple paragraphs and progress into well-organized essays. The text explains and models different types of paragraphs and essays (including process, classification, cause and effect, and compare and contrast). Organization of paragraphs is discussed, with an emphasis on coherence, cohesion and completeness. The text also describes the process of moving from paragraph to essay, and discusses the role of the thesis statement, body paragraphs and conclusion. This resource would be appropriate for level 5 ESL students or regular English classes.

This Canadian teacher resource contains ideas and suggestions to encourage level 1 and 2 ESL students to write. The chapters and exercises concentrate on providing interesting settings and contexts that students may wish to use as writing topics. Numerous student writing activities are suggested, with easy-to-follow instructions, possible adaptations and authentic student writing samples. The book emphasizes the importance of respect, cooperation and safety, and suggests ways to encourage student writing by creating a nonthreatening environment. A comprehensive annotated bibliography is also included.
